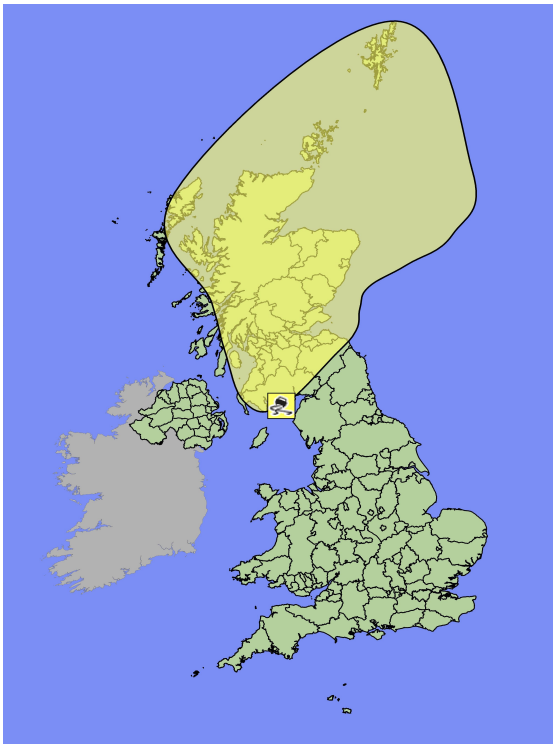
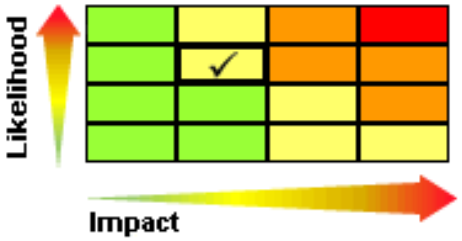
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A frontal system is expected to move eastwards into Scotland on Thursday. As precipitation encounters the cold air resident across the country it is likely to turn to sleet and snow in places, mainly on hills. As skies then clear overnight ice is likely to form on untreated surfaces.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 15:00 on Thu, 07th Feb 2013 until 11:00 on Fri, 08th Feb 2013

An area of rain, sleet and snow will move eastwards across Scotland during Thursday afternoon and evening, before clearing into the North Sea during the early hours of Friday. Any snow will be mostly light and mainly confined to ground above 200 metres, although slight slushy deposits to low levels are possible. However, as skies clear from the west, ice will become the main hazard with icy stretches expected to form on untreated surfaces. The public should be aware of possible disruption to travel.
